I want to revisit a module I previously completed

Once you have completed a module you will not be able to run it again without re-registering for the course. You can do this by re-purchasing the module or, if you're registered through your employer, you'll need their permission for us to add another enrolment to your account.

How many attempts will I have for each module/test/exam?

This will be dependent on the course that you're taking. Modules are a one-time only course, once you've completed them, you'll have to repurchase or reenrol to revisit the content.

Any module with an assessment will usually be a one-time only exam however if you are given more attempts than this, it will be stated within the module once you begin it.

What are CPD points/credits and what do they mean?

Continuing professional development (CPD) points, also sometimes known as continuing professional education (CPE) points are a way of recording learning and showing to your learning institution that you are committed to ongoing learning. Our modules are based on gaining one CPD/CPE point per hour of e-learning content. If you would like clarification on whether a specific module will count as a credit for your chosen institution, please email us on KPMGLearningAcademy@kpmg.co.uk and we'll be happy to assist.

We are also able to develop bespoke content which is accredited to your needs, be it CPD points, a Masters degree or anything in-between.

If you'd like to discuss content that is not currently in the catalogue, please visit our bespoke solutions page or email us on KPMGLearningAcademy@kpmg.co.uk
